

Ecosystem building project for open innovation

What is an innovation ecosystem?

In order to create innovation, it is important to have an innovation ecosystem. Here, the innovation ecosystem refers to a system in which existing firms, venture firms, universities, research institutions, financial institutions, government, and public agencies work closely together, and through mutual collaboration among these agencies, new value that society will accept will be created and implemented in society through new markets with growth potential.

social issue

In order to implement the results of university research in society, there is a great need to develop not only the R&D but also the ecosystem itself for social implementation.

We ask for your support as a sponsoring organization for the creation of an open innovation ecosystem and its success!
